United Way of Champaign County

Nearly

$180,000

raised since 2014

We're sitting here in Illinois, with some of the richest ground in the world. There's no need for someone here to be looking for something to eat."

-Perry "Pete" Sage, Sage Farms

In Champaign County, over 30,000 people are food insecure. Many are senior citizens, rural residents, veterans or youth. Farmers Feeding Families aims to reduce hunger and related health issues in Champaign County.

80 acres north of Champaign is planted each year with corn and beans. All the inputs and labor are donated by agribusinesses. All the profits go to five local programs that provide food to Champaign County residents.

Thanks to Farmers Feeding Families, United Way of Champaign County has been able to increase our funding to local food programs by 32%.

Here in central Illinois, United Way of Champaign County is fighting the fight against hunger and scoring big wins for our community's health. With your help, we can do even more.

Farmers Feeding Families has provided:

- Thousands of nutritious meals provided by a network of local food pantries
- Thousands of home-delivered and congregate meals for senior citizens
- Over 100 people with chronic health conditions supplemented their nutrition
- Mobile market provides fresh vegetables to 400 low income families
- Dozens of low-income, at-risk teens received employment opportunities on a working vegetable farm.
- 50 kids gained an appreciation and understanding for how things grow.
